The Jeannette Inquiry.

[illegible] Lieut. Danenhower [illegible] Arctic [illegible] tears [illegible] sections [illegible] was [illegible].

In answer to a question as to the condition of the Jeannette before the heavy pressure of the 10th, witness said [illegible] she was in the same condition as when she left San Francisco, with the exception that her fore foot was twisted.

Knowing her condition at that time, would you, if in command of the expedition, have deemed it expedient to continue the Arctic expedition?

No; for she had been fitted out originally for three years, and the supply of clothing and provisions, etc., would not warrant another year in the ice. The supply of coal also would have been insufficient for the coming winter, as the crew had already been exposed for two years to the rigors of an Arctic climate. Furthermore, it is the custom when a ship is fitted out for three years for Arctic work to return at the end of the second summer.

In reply to other questions, witness said:

Had it been any other vessel, however perfect, my judgment would have been the same.

An entry in the ship's log for the last day previous to her abandonment was identified by the witness as in the hand writing of Capt. De Long, was made part of the record and court adjourned until to-morrow.

A Serious Defect.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Col. D. B. Henderson, secretary of the republican national congressional committee, has been advised of a serious defect in the law passed by the Tennessee legislature to arrange congressional districts in that state. It appears the bill for this purpose as passed the Tennessee senate was amended in the lower house, and through a clerical error three counties, Cumberland, Marion and Rhea, which by the senate bill was assigned to the Third district, was omitted from the bill as amended in the lower house and finally agreed to by the senate, but the error was not discovered and corrected. As a consequence there were three counties not assigned to any congressional district, and voters residing in them, should an election be held under the law, will be debarred from voting for representatives in congress. Col. Henderson thinks voters in those counties cannot constitutionally be deprived of their right to vote for representatives, and if the defect is not remedied it may vitiate the title of the seat of every member elected under the new law. He has suggested that the governor of Tennessee call a special session of the legislature for the purpose of remedying the defect.

Washington Notes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—A meeting of the cabinet was held at the White House this afternoon. The president having arrived from the Soldiers' home where he will reside during his temporary stay in the city.

The session of cabinet today was short and unimportant. No names were agreed on for the vacancy in the army created by the retirement of Maj.-Gen. McDowell. The political situation in New York and Pennsylvania was informally discussed.

The president has returned in excellent health. Reports that he is suffering from Bright's disease are incorrect.

The president has appointed James P. Lore, register of the land office at Deadwood, Dakota, and Lorne Peck of New York, consul of the United States at Erie, Canada.

The president has appointed Edward F. Perry, of Utah, government director of the U. P. R. R., vice Robert H. Baker.

The president will remain here a week or ten days and then return to New York.

Stamped envelopes will be sold to the public [illegible] January 1, 1883, at a reduced rate of 10 per cent. on present prices. The postoffice department has also arranged for a special rate on request notices [illegible] envelopes with additional charge when ordered in quantities of 500 or more. Assistant Postmaster General Hazen states the fact is not generally known that stamped envelopes when spoiled through misdirection or otherwise can be exchanged for postage stamps of the same denomination at the nearest postoffice.

Secretary Teller's Intentions.

Secretary Teller expects to start for Colorado to-morrow night, and may be absent several weeks. He says he is not a candidate for the senate from that state; that he accepted the cabinet position with the intention of retaining it till the expiration of the president's term of office, and that after that time he will devote himself to his business affairs, which have been neglected to considerable extent since he entered the senate.

Senator Spencer's Delinquencies.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—It has been reported the president would remove ex-Senator Spencer, who is one of the government directors of the U. P. There is probably no truth in this rumor, as the president was officially informed of Spencer's effort to evade the summons of the government as a witness in star route cases, and he took no notice of the delinquency.

POLITICAL.

The Virginia Outlook.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—A Washington special states: We shall carry the state of Virginia by 20,000 majority and elect 7 of the 9 congressmen. That is the confident assertion of Senator Mahone, whose statement is concurred in by Gov. Cameron, Collector Brady, Prof. Langston and a score of republicans and readjuster leaders, who have been here in conference with Mahone the last two days. There can be little doubt that Mahone will be successful.

Speaking of the effect of the Ohio election upon the republican cause in other states Gov. Cameron has just said: "It will have no effect upon Virginia," and he predicted the readjusters would elect six of the nine congressmen, and the majority for congressman at large, John D. Wise, would be greater than for himself (Cameron) as governor a year ago. "The bourbon founders of Virginia," added Gov. Cameron, "are as dead as they can be, but do not know it."

Illinois Politics.

Gov. Cullom says, answering a Tribune reporter: "I have been over the state somewhat and am satisfied that we are going to elect our state ticket by a good majority and carry the legislature. There is no great amount of disaffection in the party and our chances of success are good."

What about the prohibition issue?

"I think we occupy a different position on the question from the party in Ohio, and the republican vote, in my judgment, will not be affected by this question in Illinois as it was in Ohio, and it isn't before the people as it was in Ohio, and is not so likely to affect the relative position of the parties as it did there."

What New York must Expect.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The congressional committee to investigate the shipping question will be here next week. Member S. S. Cox has just been renominated by his constituents who reside in a part of the city which has never manifested any particular interest in ships or shipping, but he says this makes no difference to him, as he proposes to treat New York as a British port.

Changed Coats.

[illegible], Oct. 20.—The Tribune, heretofore a republican paper, this evening comes out for the entire democratic ticket, saying editorially they can't close their eyes to the fact that the democratic party is the liberal one and holds out to all lovers of personal rights the right hand of fellowship, and they gladly join hands against fanatical legislation and the abuses and extravagance of the republican party.

"Rosy's" Prediction.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The Star's Washington special says: Congressman Rosecrans in a private letter to a friend here, says: Page, the republican nominee for reelection for congress in the second district, is the only republican who will be re-elected to congress in California this fall, and that state will go democratic by 5,000 majority.

Brooklyn Democratic Nominations.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The democrats of Brooklyn have made the following nominations: Register, Col. Thos. Carroll; county clerk, Rodney Thursby; surrogate, Jacob J. Bergen; county treasurer, Thos. Percy A fame; justice of sessions, Adolph Gamer.

The dismay which the present scale of judicial rents has created among applicants to land courts renders it more necessary now than ever that tenantry should be reunited in solid, thorough and lawful association for the purpose of protecting themselves from injury. The inspiration of our struggles is to transfer all local power and patronage from privileged strangers to the hands of the people, and so fortify the people for the work of self-government."

Seattle Notes.

SEATTLE, Oct. 20.—Fifty, second mate of the ship Harvester, was tried and convicted to-day on the charge of cruelty to members of the crew, and Bennett, the first mate, was tried and acquitted again to-day. These trials will probably end the criminal prosecutions of the Harvester officers which may be summarized as follows: Two indictments of Capt. Allen being quashed and an acquittal being secured on the trial of the other. Four indictments of First Mate Bennett, with three convictions and one acquittal, and two indictments of Second Mate Fifty and two convictions. The prosecution for damages or $500 apiece to each of the fifteen seamen on board remains to be tried. A motion was made to-day for a change of venue in the cases of the 9th case of the ship [illegible], so that for the defense alleging that public sentiment is so strong against the accused that it will be impossible to get an impartial trial.

Chow, from select committee appointed to examine the returns of the Willamette falls and locks commissioners, reported that it appears from said returns that said corporation has failed to pay any portion of its revenues into the state treasury; that from the exhibits and statements of receipts and expenditures of said corporation, it appears that a large amount of interest has been charged as disbursements and deducted from the gross receipts of the company; that this interest so charged is interest on the bonded indebtedness of the company that in our judgment the right of said corporation to deduct from its gross receipts such interest is a question that should be investigated, and the legality thereof be determined by competent counsel.

Your committee would therefore submit to the consideration of the senate and recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, by the Senate, the House concurring, That the board of canal commissioners be and they are hereby authorized to employ necessary counsel to investigate the right of the Willamette Falls canal and Locks Company to deduct from its receipts the interest on its bonded indebtedness, and that a report thereon be made to the next legislative assembly; adopted.

It was claimed that this did not suit Multnomah and they did some very successful filibustering, and various calls of house and ayes and noes, and what further call was moved to be dispensed with also called ayes and noes, Multnomah voting no. The motion, however, was carried.

Then previous question was moved, on which Tanner and Harris called for ayes and noes. It was carried.

Tanner moved call of house and Multnomah called for ayes and noes.

Ready, of Benton, raised a point of order that previous question should first be disposed of and his point was sustained.

Gault here appealed from decision of the chair, and the chair was sustained by a vote of 50 to 3.

MITCHELL'S "OPEN LETTER."

SALEM, [illegible]

[illegible] chairman of the republican [illegible] to the [illegible] members of the [illegible] and [illegible] of any candidate to be supported for United States senator.

In the joint caucus held the deliberations of [illegible] by thirty-one votes of the forty-eight [illegible] all the republican members of the legislature.

This nomination then became the duty [illegible] all present [illegible] which, as I am advised, had received the votes of all present in such caucus, pledging support to the person who should receive therein the votes of a majority of all the republicans in the two houses.

As yet there has been no election.

For reasons which to themselves it must be presumed are satisfactory, a sufficient number of republican members, headed in the first instance by eleven, and have ever since, with one exception, persistently refused to be governed by the [illegible] expressed will of not only a clear majority but of two-thirds of their party brethren, and have thus created a deadlock, and are [illegible] maintaining it for over four weeks.

By this action of a minority the very existence of the organization of the republican party in the state is being seriously threatened and the vital principle upon which all representative government, as well as political parties must rest for stability and security, is being placed in imminent peril.

The republican party, its principles and the maintenance of its organization, are, and ever should be in the mind of every true republican, of infinitely more importance than the mere personal wishes, ambition, triumph or defeat of any individual. It is moreover, in my judgment, equally true that the maintenance and perpetuity of that principle (not of party caucus merely, because that is but one among many means of ascertaining the will of the majority) recognized in all true republican governments, and upon which the republican party was founded, and by which its organization, state and national, has ever been maintained, is of incalculably more importance to the future existence, to say nothing of the health and vigor of the party than is the mere temporary personal triumph of a minority composed of less than one-third.

Prior to the caucus in the contest, so far as there was any contest, was between men, where an however, the majority of the republicans in the legislature had after due deliberation honestly and fairly expressed their preference for one man, whether that preference was expressed in party caucus, or conference according to universal party usage, or by solemn vote in joint convention, the contest at once, so far as party purposes and effect are concerned, ceased to be personal, and became one of principle—a struggle for and against the maintenance of the organization of the republican party and the vindication of party usage; and as well the contestants for the nomination as the member himself—properly and necessarily should have dropped out of consideration, and in political bearing and effect did. It then became a question pure and simple whether the fairly and deliberately expressed will of the majority or that of the minority should rule. I believe no one of the minority, or in fact any one else, pretends that there was any unfairness in the caucus nomination, or that improper means were used for the purpose of controlling its action.

In view of the foregoing considerations, in connection with the further fact that I have during the past week been earnestly pressed by a large number of the members whose votes I received in caucus to not permit the withdrawal of my name, it must be apparent to every candid man, that my position becomes one of extreme embarrassment. I have shrunk from no responsibility nor have I any difficulty in determining my line of duty. I have no personal claims whatever. There are no personal claims that [illegible] any man to the [illegible] of the party. The [illegible] is to the maintenance of the organization and the perpetuity of its principles.

Organized and unorganized rebellion within the party against the honestly expressed will of the majority, whatever may be the pretense or excuse assigned, shall always meet with my unqualified and determined, yet frank, dignified opposition. Whenever, in my judgment, the majority after having in good faith determined upon a nomination, whether in a state or county convention, or in a legislative caucus, surrenders to a minority, it will be time to [illegible] the majority [illegible] there to be but little to hope for in the future of party government and organization.

This, however, is simply my individual opinion of what is [illegible]. Hence, I now say to the majority that [illegible] so faithfully [illegible] support to the present time, do with me as you in your wisdom may deem best under all the circumstances, having in view solely, not my personal desires or ambition, but the future welfare of the republican party.

If in your judgment the best interests of the republican party in Oregon require that I be [illegible] dropped as your candidate, then your duty is clear, and you should not for one moment hesitate to abandon me [illegible]. If, on the other hand, in your good judgment, I shall join with you most cordially in striving to do that which seems to you for the best interests of the party.

I am in your hands, ready to stand by you and with you to the last as the regular nominee of the party, until you decide to the contrary, wholly willing at any time, however, to stand aside if this be your determination, and I beg of each and all to permit no personal preference for me, no considerations as to my personal welfare or political future to stand in the way of what you may conceive to be your plain duty to the republican party of the state.

With profound regard for each and all, and thanking you kindly and heartily for the cordial support accorded me, I am,

Very truly, your obedient servant,

JOHN H. MITCHELL.

COMMENTS BY THE SALEM STATESMAN.

The "open letter" of Mr. Mitchell to Mr. McConnell, chairman of an alleged caucus, is a most remarkable production. We do not refer to its literary character, but to its faulty English. Its author's mind at the time of writing, was evidently so troubled [illegible] to great [illegible] which it will sufficiently account for its lameness in this respect. It is an ingenious piece of special pleading on the part of a desperate and ambitious man, who feels his last prop giving away under him, that this letter will attract attention.

Under the thin disguise of declaring that his personal wishes and political future should not be allowed to imperil the usefulness of the party which has already honored him to its utmost, not to say disgrace, he seeks to make political capital for himself by a false pretense of willingness to sacrifice himself to the alter of party success. But between the lines runs a piteous appeal to his friends to stand by him to the end, at the cost of adjourning without an election. It was for this purpose, and to create a prejudice against the action of the eighteen, that the letter was written. In brief he declares that he is ready to stand by and with his friends to the last, "ending with the wail of the sinking Caesar, "Et tu, Cassius, or [illegible]!"

The truth is, the statement that [illegible] is in the hands of his friends, and his pretended self-abnegation, are the merest shams. This letter is intended for the public eye, while he buttonholes each of his friends and implores them to stay with him to the extremity.

The letter is like the one written to Col. Reed for publication, requesting his friends to support the [illegible] in Marion, while through the action of his friends after the receipt of his letter, one can readily believe the rumor that he privately wrote to others to [illegible] Marion county go to [illegible]. The open letter is suggestive of his course in the contest of 1866, when he publicly told the members to vote for Gibbs, the caucus nominee, with the private hint, when it won't elect.

As his devoted man Friday, sometimes known as [illegible], wisely said in connection on the open letter, it is merely intended to meet public clamor. It is the last straw, at which the drowning man [illegible] at.

It will not save him. The people are too familiar with his letters by this time, and are accustomed to find their true meaning, rather in what they do not pretend to express, than in the literal wording. The open letter is too thin.

Blaine Vieing with Tilden.

Washington Cor. Baltimore Sun.

Mr. Blaine was in New York recently and read in one of the papers there a finely prepared description of Gov. Tilden's new mansion. One thing that struck him particularly was the way the dining-room was finished up. He visited the house and was particularly pleased. He immediately made up his mind that the dining-room of his own house should be fitted out like it. He accordingly telegraphed his builder to meet him in New York. The two then visited Mr. Tilden's house. The builder was asked to prepare an estimate of what it would cost to make the Blaine dining-room like it. The builder made the necessary calculations, talked with Mr. Tilden's contractor, and then sat down and began figuring. In a day's time he gave Mr. Blaine his answer. "Well, how much will it cost?" Mr. Blaine asked. "My instructions," replied the builder, "put it at $[illegible]." "I am supposed to be an unusually rich man," remarked Mr. Blaine in reply, "but I'll tell you candidly I can't stand such a dining room as that. I have very much, still while Gov. Tilden can have such things, I'll have to dispense with them. Why, my entire house finished won't cost [illegible] more than that. $ [illegible] for a dining-room! We will have to give it up." Gov. Tilden is on top this time, sure." The builder returned and Mr. Blaine's dining room will be finished according to the original plan. It is elegant, however, as it is, but rather of the elegance of the simplicity of an [illegible].

ELECTION OF J. N. DOLPH.

The long contest has ended in the election of Joseph N. Dolph to the United States senate. It is a result which will be accepted as a fortunate deliverance from a controversy of which the whole state had become weary, and which for several weeks had attracted national attention. Mr. Dolph had not been a candidate at all, though from the first he had been regarded by many as the man who might at last more easily unite the divided interests of the republican party than any other. So it proved. When the voting for him began the movement rapidly increased, till a decided majority had pronounced for him and he was declared elected.

Mr. Dolph is too well known to the people of the whole state to need any introduction. He is known as a man of high honor, great industry, broad culture and solid worth. Twenty years he has lived in Portland, where he has reached high position, acquired reputation, grown into a very extensive business and made his mark upon affairs. As a lawyer he stands at the head of the bar. With great power of application to business he possesses also a cautious, just and discriminating judgment. His industry is well known; perhaps no man among us has carried for years past a greater weight of important business. He knows the state thoroughly, and has the ability to serve it, and as a representative at the national capital he may be expected to acquit himself with credit and honor. We are only saying what every one will concede at once who knows J. N. Dolph, that he is as fully equipped to render the state honor and service as any man whom Oregon has ever sent to the senate of the United States.

Mr. Dolph is thoroughly a republican—a republican upon principle and conviction. All his life he has disinterestedly upheld the principles of the republican party. He has never been a seeker for place, has never presented himself as a candidate. The republican party now has reason to congratulate itself upon his election, which will quiet all dissensions and insure harmony and good will, while the state will have the services of an able, industrious and conscientious representative.

GOOD SENSE AND MODERATE COUNSELS.

Members of the legislature showed their good sense by refusing to heed the demand of irresponsible persons for adjournment without an election. In this they had praiseworthy regard for their duty. They saw—they were to see—that it would not do to let any preference for individuals become paramount to their larger duty as representatives. For this they are to be alike congratulated and commended. It was a view that was sure to prevail at last.

The republican members, too, who threw aside their differences and united for a common object, are to be congratulated on an act which has delivered their party from a grave peril. In this result no section of the party has triumphed over another. There has been no dictation; there can be no claim to pre-eminence or mastery. Good sense and moderation have prevailed, and a result has been reached in which all members of the party can acquiesce, and which all will approve.

BRANDY AND INSANITY.

It is the frequent assertion of persons engaged in the manufacture of wine that there is comparatively little drunkenness in the wine-producing countries, and they put this forward as an argument against the manufacture of alcoholic beverages and the encouragement of grape culture. Again, the beer-making and beer-drinking classes assert that but a small proportion of the drunkenness is caused by malt drinks. The distillers do not claim that the product of the still will not intoxicate, but could they not do so with as much propriety as the others do that wine and beer do not produce drunkenness. France is the greatest wine-producing country on the earth, and according to the report of United States Consul Gifford, at La Rochelle, intemperance and its effects are as striking there as in the United States, which, so far, figures prominently in the intoxicating business only as a producer of whisky. California is the only American state where the wine industry has assumed large proportions, and we all know that our neighbors are as much given to drunkenness as are the people of Kentucky, who are generally supposed to be "raised on the bottle." The beer-drinking classes also are quite as often under the influence of their favorite beverage as are those who confine themselves to alcohol in the less diluted form. The English drink beer largely, and they outrank Americans in drunkenness. But Consul Gifford furnishes other facts that ought to set Americans to thinking. He says no pure brandy is now made in Cognac; that what is sold for Cognac brandy has for its stock or foundation alcohol distilled in Germany from potatoes; this fluid is doctored and flavored and large quantities are sold to French workmen; much also is exported, this latter chiefly to the United States. The consul says: "Its characteristic effect is to produce an intoxication in which the patient is especially inclined to rage and physical violence, while hopeless insanity is the inevitable consequence of persisting in its use, even for a relatively short period of time." He quotes from managers of insane asylums and from physicians to bear him out in his assertion, some of the former going so far as to say that the larger part of their patients owe their misfortune to the use of impure brandy and absinthe. The brandy invariably produces insanity, in numerous instances the mind being unsettled in less than three months. Those who drink the alleged French cheap brandy that is sold in America should reflect upon the consequences when swallowing the poison.

ARABI AND THE ENGLISH.

Arabi Pasha demands a trial by Englishmen. This is a practical compliment to England, a bitter reflection upon Egypt and the expression of personal despair. Whatever may have been the criminality of Arabi, it was a criminality that is shared by the Egyptian people at large, and was sanctified by the permission and encouragement of the sultan himself. The parties against whom the revolt was made were the khedive and the British government. The khedive was the ostensible head of the government; really, he was but the intermediary of two distinct powers, the sublime porte and Great Britain. Turkey absolutely refused to support him, and had it not been for the intervention of the British the khedive would have fallen completely into the power of Arabi and the revolutionists and would have been reduced to a puppet in their hands, or subjected to a still worse experience. But England interfered to protect her own rights, as represented in the khedive, and after a sharp experience, forced Egypt to receive again the khedive as the only ruler they may expect. In doing so England has snubbed Turkey, humiliated Egypt and ruined Arabi Pasha and his so-called fellow-patriots. The khedive is the only party obliged by England, and his position is so plainly precarious that it must be supported for some time to come by British bayonets. England is great enough to be lenient; so probably Arabi will not suffer.

The report of the dead letter office for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1882, indicates that, notwithstanding all the new devices for disposing of the letters, in the shape of printed notices on the envelopes directing the return of the missives to the writers in case they were not called for, there is a steady increase in the number of letters that find their way to the dead letter office—the increase last year being 15 per cent. over that of the previous year. Of the total number opened 14,989 contained money, an increase of 7 per cent. over the previous year; 21,655 contained drafts, checks, notes and money orders, an increase of 11½ per cent.; 41,731 contained receipts, certificates, paid notes and such paper, an increase of 17 per cent.; 39,212 contained photographs, an increase of 10 per cent.; 52,458 contained postage stamps, a decrease of 14½ per cent.; 30,841 contained merchandise and books, an increase of 20½ per cent.; while 3,406,577, or an increase of 17 per cent., contained nothing of value. The decrease in the number containing postage stamps was probably due to increase in money orders.

It was complained yesterday that the United States court, in sending a bench warrant to Salem for Len Simpson, committed a most unpardonable act of interference with the election. We hear the act of the court severely censured.

HON. JOSEPH N. DOLPH

Elected Yesterday United States Senator for Oregon.

TEN HOURS OF BALLOTING AND 42 BALLOTS.

The Decid ng Vote Cast within One Minute of the Hour of Adjournment—The Contest In Detail.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

SALEM, Oct. 20.—Midnight.—At precisely 10 o'clock to-night, at the last minute of the last hour of the last day of the legislative session, Hon. Joseph N. Dolph, of Portland, was elected senator, receiving 51 of the 54 republican votes in the legislature, six more than enough to elect. The final ballot was the 55th of the session. At precisely noon to-day the two houses entered into joint convention and balloted continuously for ten hours. For the first two or three hours one vote followed another with tedious repetition, as shown by the bulletins. After every ballot a motion to adjourn was made by democrats, and was opposed by both republican factions. About half past three, however, the independents, one by one voted aye with democrats until the vote stood 45 to 45, a tie. The votes of the independents, about half of whom at one time stood on an adjournment motion with the democrats, were cast with the purpose of notifying the Mitchell people that they did not propose to weaken. By preconcerted action they arranged a tie vote, and from it dated the decline in Mitchell's strength. The first break was by Moses of Clackamas, who, about half-past three, changed to Dolph. Others followed, each with an explanation and only one or two at a ballot until half-past nine. At this time, when the excitement was at a high point, the democrats commenced dilatory proceedings following motions to adjourn, with motion for recess, with the purpose of delaying the ballot till after 10, the hour fixed for adjournment. At seven minutes before 10, however, the hurried call of roll on the 55th ballot commenced, and at its end, the tally sheets showing that Dolph lacked seven or eight votes of election, no time left to ballot again. Then one after another of the Mitchell supporters changed his vote to Dolph, till as the clock was striking 10, the 46th man had changed. This scene beggars description. The crowd which filled the hall to its utmost capacity, and members as well, rose to their feet and greeted each change with a ringing cheer. It was a supreme moment, and as there was an element of sadness in it, as one after another—some choking back the moment's grief—said, "I love my party before any man in it. I vote for Dolph." And even those whose nerve at the very moment of triumph, mingled with the fierce joy of victory, brushed tears away. 'Twas a great victory, but I never want to see another like it.

12 A. M.—A reception to Dolph at the Chemeketa is now in progress and attended by nearly all republican and some democratic members of the legislature and many others. Speeches have been made by Dolph, Geo. H. Williams, Mitchell, Humphreys, Siglin, R. Y. Thompson, Tanner and Kelsay. Others will speak before the affair, which is most cordial and hearty, closes.

THE "OREGONIAN'S" BULLETINS.

SALEM, Oct. 20.—First ballot: Mitchell 37, Bonham 28, H. Williams 22, Failing 1, Herman 1, Shattuck 1. Chandelier in center of hall hung with cheese, sausage, etc. Many members brought lunch and have come to stay.

6:20 P. M.—Motion to adjourn lost, 43 to 47. Convention took rest of half an hour, coming to order at 4:50. Twenty-fifth ballot—Moses changed from Mitchell to Earhart, and Smith voted for Earhart; no other change.

6:25 P. M.—Twenty-sixth ballot—Mitchell 30, Bonham 28, H. Williams 18, Earhart 5, Shattuck 1. Moses, Sharp, Smith, Stearns and Webb voted for Earhart. Mitchell's friends are trying to make him withdraw. Leaders in conference with him. Kelly and Harris will change to Dolph next ballot.

6:35 P. M.—Twenty-seventh ballot—Kelly, Tanner, Harris, Truitt and Waters, changed from Mitchell to Dolph. Eakin changed from Williams to Dolph. This is an effort to force democrats to vote for Mitchell, whom many of them preferred to Dolph.

7:16 P. M.—Motion to adjourn lost; 33 ayes. 30th ballot—Lee changed from Williams to Dolph, Marston from Mitchell to Dolph, Moses from Earhart to Dolph, McBride from Mitchell to Rowland.

9:50 P. M.—Forty-first ballot—Hall and Starkweather left Mitchell for Dolph. Dolph's vote 35, Mitchell 20. Motion to adjourn lost. Motion for recess lost. Democrats filibustering to delay ballot till after 10 o'clock. Motion to adjourn lost.

An Election at Last.

10:02 P. M.—Dolph elected.

10:10 P. M.—Dolph had 51 votes on last ballot. Last vote precisely at 10 o'clock.

Changes in the Last Ballot.

10:20 P. M.—Before the 42d ballot McConnell announced that on this or the next ballot he would leave Mitchell. Motion to take recess ruled out of order. Dorris appealed, chair sustained. On the 42d ballot Brown changed from Mitchell to Dolph, Humphrey from Hill to Mitchell; Keady, Hill to George Parker, from Bonham to Mitchell; Willoue, from Mitchell to Dolph; Marston, from Mitchell to Dolph; McConnell to Dolph, Humphrey to Dolph, Hunt to Dolph, Waters to Dolph, Sifers to Bonham, Tyson to Dolph, Seppington to Dolph, Dufur to Dolph, Marquam to Dolph, Morris to Dolph, Stewart to Dolph, Stanton to Dolph, Parker to Bonham. These changes, except the last two, were made after the roll call and when the clock hand was approaching ten. The excitement was great and the applause following the last change was deafening. During the whole ten hours of the balloting to-day the hall of the house has been crowded, many ladies being present.

10:30 P. M.—The vote on the final ballot stood, after all changes were made:

[illegible]—Wm. Baker, who was confined in the city jail on the charge of larceny from a person, [illegible] a few nights ago, in which G. B. THE SENATORIAL CONTEST.

Unparalleled Excitement Over the Proceedings at Salem—How the News was Received.

[illegible]

TWO SPLENDID MEASURES.

The Pilotage Bill and the Bill against Fishing on the Bar become Laws.

Yesterday Mr. Donald Macleay, president of the board of trade, received the following telegrams:

SALEM, O., Oct. 20.

Donald Macleay: The governor has signed the pilot bill.

J. C. CARSON.

SALEM, O., Oct. 20.

Donald Macleay: H. B. 140 has passed the senate.

J. C. CARSON.

Mr. Macleay answered as follows:

PORTLAND, Oct. 20th, 1882.

Hon. J. C. Carson,
House of Representatives, Salem, Or.

The state of Oregon and the board of trade feel grateful to you and to your colleagues for the passage in both houses of the Pilot and Salmon bills.

DONALD MACLEAY,
President board of trade.

The Pilot bill means a divorcement of the towage and pilotage system on the Columbia river bar; a reduction of nearly 20 per cent. in the price of pilotage, and a strictly non-partisan, non-political board of commissioners, one to be chosen by the board of United States engineers, one by the Portland board of trade and one by the Astoria chamber of commerce.

The salmon bill provides that it will be unlawful to fish in the Columbia river below a point from the flag staff of Fort Stevens to the top of Scarborough hill, and means that its fishermen will not be permitted to destroy the channel through the Columbia river bar.

"THE LIGHTS O'LONDON."

We are pleased to notice that this long promised and much talked of melodrama will be given at New Market theatre by W. R. Palmer's dramatic company. The scenery to be used has been painted by Wm. T. Porter and assistants, and is said to be very beautiful. A brief reference to the story of the play at this time will suffice. The object of the author was to place before the public in dramatic form, and therefore the more vividly, a series of pictures depicting the struggles and sufferings of the poor and forsaken. His style of composition so successfully effected by G. R. Sims in all or many of his efforts that he has, by many, become to be regarded as the Dickens of to-day. We are told that in the "Lights O'London" the aim of the author imperatively determines the scenes of his play; and they will be found to consist, not of mysterious holes and corners of London where crime seeks its hiding places, but of some legal and illegal public localities, and the various whose, in London as in New York, utter destitution tries to steal an hour's fitful forgetfulness in sleep; the cold parks, the shadows of the bridges, the casual wards of the asylums for the poor, and finally the almost inevitable police station. The "Lights O'London" will be played here for only one week. This, with the conceded interest of the play, will doubtless attract large houses during their brief stay here. The company goes directly back to California to play previous engagements.

DR. POTTS' LECTURE.

It would be difficult to get together a larger, more intelligent and earnest audience than that assembled at Masonic hall last evening to hear Mrs. Dr. Potts' lecture to husbands and wives. Promptly at 8 o'clock the little Quaker lady stepped upon the stage. She at once approached her subject with a very earnest, thoughtful and almost reverent exordium. The lecturer then called attention to the difference in structure of the two skeletons she had unveiled, stating that one was that of a man and the other of a woman. She gave a detailed explanation of the differences, showing that, although the number of bones were the same, the anatomy was, in many important particulars, radically dissimilar. She then spoke of the delicate and very sensitive organization of woman, showing how much more liable they are to be injured by violent exercise than men. She spoke again at the pastime indulged in by school girls of jumping the rope. She condemned the practice of running up and down stairs by school girls, and the said school teachers ought to prevent it, and they probably would if they knew the importance of so doing. She condemned high school houses in which girls have to climb and descend stairs many times a day. She also spoke about how carelessly ladies jump out of carriages and of the seeming ignorance of many gentlemen in assisting them to alight, by extending only one hand and making a hollow pretense of breaking their descent. By oil paintings the doctor illustrated the consequences of these injurious habits. The anatomical structure of woman precluded the possibility of her bearing heavy physical burdens without most injurious consequences, although man possessed superior strength and endurance, woman's great function of maternity placed the two sexes on an equal footing. She illustrated the penalties imposed by nature on those who violate her laws. It was a lecture that brought home to her audience the fact that there are more things in many a man's and woman's married life than was ever dreamed of in our philosophy. There was not the faintest trace of charlatanry in the lecture, but, rather, an earnest, motherly desire to do good.

Monday evening Dr. Potts delivers her last lecture. Subject, "Love, Courtship and Marriage." All may attend.

KNOCKED DOWN AND ROBBED.

Edward Dekum, a clerk in the book store of J. K. Gill & Co., was knocked down on the street and robbed last night about nine o'clock, while on his way home. When in the vicinity of the Park school, near Madison street, he was ordered to halt and deliver his purse. Mr. Dekum was walking along with an umbrella under his arm and his hand thrust inside of the pocket of his overcoat. Discovering the position of the hand of his intended victim, the footpad concluded that he was reaching into his pocket for a weapon, and immediately struck Dekum a terrible blow with a sand bag across the forehead, knocking him to the ground in an insensible condition, after which he dealt another blow [illegible] The villain then rifled the pockets of his unconscious victim, obtaining his purse and a few dollars in money, and escaped. Mr. Dekum was taken to police headquarters in a cab, where, after recovering consciousness, he gave an account of the deadly assault. He was then taken home. The injuries are probably not serious, but will confine him to his room for some time.

FINE FURNITURE.

Mr. J. Luchsinger, of the firm of John B. Luchsinger & Son, of San Francisco, Cal., manufacturers of elegant furniture, bank and office fittings, wooden mantles, parquet floors, etc., is now in Portland and will take orders for anything in the line of artistic furniture, to make and deliver the same at shortest notice. Having furnished several of the finest residences in this city, and now fitting up the new offices of the First National bank, they feel confident that their past record will prove of sufficient importance to secure from those who contemplate furnishing their houses at least a portion of their patronage. Designs of all kinds, as well as samples of the newest patterns of upholstery goods, will be shown those desiring it, by addressing J. Luchsinger, 134 Washington street, corner of Seventh, or Esmond house, corner Front and Morrison streets.

Concerning the lecture to husbands and wives to be delivered at Masonic hall to-night, the Daily Alta of San Francisco says: "Dashaway hall was crowded last evening to hear Mrs. Dr. Potts lecture to husbands and wives. While the lecture cannot be reported, on account of the delicacy of the subject spoken of, we can say the language used was chaste and pure, and we firmly believe that there was not one of the many intelligent people present who did not respect the eloquent speaker and feel the importance of the vital subject she presented. Dr. Potts is evidently no charlatan or enthusiast, striving to advance impractical ideas or a crotchet to result in an earnest, thoughtful, practical physician. [illegible] At the close of the lecture the lady was greeted with rapturous and prolonged applause."

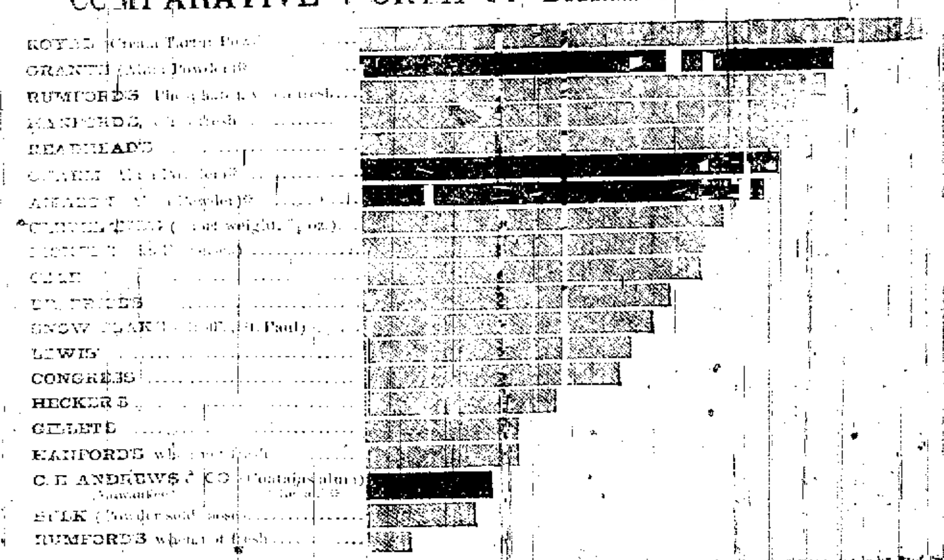
COMPARATIVE WORTH OF BAKING POWDERS.



The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative strength of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A one-pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated in the above diagram. This practical test for strength by Prof. SCHEDLER only proves what every observant consumer of the ROYAL BAKING POWDER knows by experience, that while it costs a few cents per pound more than the ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the ROYAL BAKING POWDER will convince any fair-minded person of these facts.

While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum baking powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS, DRS. LOVE AND MOTT:

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances.

"E. G. LOVE, Ph. D."

"H. A. MOTT, Ph. D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure.

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious substance.

"HENRY MORTON, M. D., President Stevens Institute Technology."

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome.

"S. DANA HAYES, State Assayer, Mass."

"June 23, 1882.—I have made a careful analytical test of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the open market here and in the original package. I find it to be a cream of tartar powder of the highest degree of strength, containing nothing but pure and wholesome ingredients.

"JUAN H. WRIGHT, M. D., Analytical Chemist, formerly Wright & Merrill, St. Louis."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, and at the State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists and boards of health over all the world.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The latest attraction at the London [illegible] rium is a Javanese orchestra, comprising eighteen performers, who are supposed to enjoy the distinction of forming the first complete company of the kind ever to leave Java. Four of the performers are dancing women whose peculiar motions are directed by the musicians squatting upon the platform. There is one two-stringed fiddle, and one instrument similar to a flute, but the rest of the pieces are instruments of percussion upon which the players beat with great vigor.

Beethoven's violin has come into the possession of an English gentleman [illegible] wall. Beethoven, before his death, gave it to his old friend, Carl Holz, whose widow sold it three years ago to its present possessor. The violin bears on the back a B, which seems cut by a chisel. On the inner side is inscribed "Eliza Holz, geborene von Bognar." The authenticity of the instrument is proved by official documents, and by a portrait engraved by Scob and inscribed by the master's own hand, "A. M. Von Holz de son ami Beethoven."

A negro in the jail at Forsyth, Ga., it is said, has eaten nothing in two months. The veracious editor of the Marietta Journal, who vouches for the statement, says: "He has lost about sixty pounds of flesh, and is merely a skeleton. He cannot walk a step, and can only get up with assistance. When lying quiet he has the appearance of a dead man. His temperature and pulse are far below normal, and his respiration yesterday was only eight per minute. The blood has settled about in spots under the epidermis, and he looks somewhat like a calico circus horse in a trance."

Thus far there has been no reaction, or sign of one, in the rent charges that have prevailed for a year in Scotland. Very recently a farm in Forfarshire that was let in 1866 for $2750 a year was relet on a nineteen years' lease for $1875. Some time after 1869 the rent of this farm was reduced to $2500, and several years ago it was again reduced to $2250. A piece of property near this, one which ten years ago was rented for $2100, has been let again for $1425, having been of late rented for $1375. Another Scotch landowner, but one who was unwilling to reduce his rents, has been obliged to take the property into his own hands.

A man from Maine who visited New York city recently, strayed into the suburbs and sat down under a tree to enjoy the scenery. Finally, overcome by drowsiness, he fell asleep. In his waistcoat-pocket he had placed a roll of bills amounting to about $175, a small portion of which protruded. Before dozing he had noticed, but paid no particular attention to, the antics of a goat in the immediate vicinity. On awakening, however, he at once missed the roll of bills, and a brief search revealed the fact that the goat had abstracted the money, shaken it up, made a lunch of several notes, and utterly ruined most of the remainder. The victim recovered only $15.

A shrewd advertiser in New York City hires a young man for 25 cents an hour to stand in front of his store and gaze fixedly at the windows. The simple scheme has been found to be very successful. The young man's attitude and gaze attracted the attention of a plasterer who was passing. The plasterer stopped short and followed with his eyes the gaze of the young man. A boy observing the youth and the plasterer staring across the street, joined them. Then came a washwoman, then a bank clerk, then a man of leisure, then two negro swells, and finally a sizable crowd of promiscuous nature was collected, all looking in silent admiration at two men in an opposite window, who were engaged, one in swinging Indian clubs, one in pulling away at a patent chest expander.

A good story is going the rounds in London. During Edwin Booth's recent engagement at the Adelphi the Prince of Wales attended his performance, and sent for him to receive the royal congratulations. "I desire to ask you one very important question, Mr. Booth," said the prince. Booth's brain reeled. In a second it flashed upon him that he was to be asked his terms for appearing at Buckingham palace or Windsor castle; or, perhaps he was to be called upon to solve some great artistic problem that had baffled all the English tragedians. He bowed low and murmured his willingness to oblige his royal highness. "What do you think, Mr. Booth," continued the prince, "of—Mrs. Langtry's prospects in America?" The famous tragedian will never be able to explain what he replied, nor how he found his way back to the dressing-room.

Evangelist Barnes, who is now in Cincinnati, and who expects to make, some time in the near future, an effort to enlighten the superstitious heathen of Chicago, has a new and novel way of presenting the great truth. An extract from one of his sermons about David and Goliah reads: "Some man bolted into the hut of Saul and announced that a champion had come forth, and Saul said: 'Bring him in.' He expected some man fourteen feet high, and lifted up his eyes at an angle of forty-five degrees. 'Where is he' (surprised)? 'He is in.' 'Why, my son, what are you talking about? Go home to your mamma. You must be joking.' 'Will you just listen to me?' asked little David. 'Yes, you're a nice boy; go on.' Then said David: 'Thy servant kept his father's sheep, and there was a lion and a bear came and took a lamb out of the flock. Thy servant that slew both the lion and the bear will beat the brains out of this uncircumcised Philistine.' Saul began to see the point. 'My son, it's a fact. Why didn't I think of it before? Go out and win. But come, let's have a little common sense in this matter. Bring in my armor.' And they loaded the little fellow down with 800 or 900 pounds of brass. 'I can't wear this, I ain't used to this sort of thing,' said David, and he put it off."

Lieut. Danenhower has given to a reporter of the Washington Star an account of Alexy, the hero of the Jeannette expedition, whose name was little known until found and penned so often in the sad journal of Commander De Long. During all that march to death in the Lena delta, it will be remembered, it was Alexy who went on ahead to explore the way, it was Alexy who secured for the wanderers their meagre supply of food, it was Alexy who gave his coat to save De Long from freezing, and it was Alexy who, faithful to the end, at last succumbed and lay down to die among the last survivors. This brave man was an Alaskan Indian, from St. Michael's Norton Sound. He was finely proportioned, with small, delicate looking hands and feet. Among the Jeannette's crew he was a general favorite on account of his polite manners and readiness to help in any work. He learned the English alphabet, became expert at stuffing birds, and also learned to draw. He was a fine dancer, and often amused the crew by illustrations of Indian war dances. He was very fond of his family, and at times became homesick, fearing his wife and little boy would not have sufficient clothing while he was away. Before sailing he had made arrangements to have his pay all given to his wife. She will not know of his death until next spring, and it is thought that some arrangement will be made by which she will receive his pay up to that time.

Jungle Life.

Professor Haeckel has been giving in the German Rundschau an account of his travels in Ceylon, and recently he described his first attempt to penetrate a Ceylon jungle. He found it to correspond to the idea of a primeval forest with its dense and impenetrable mass of trees of all kinds surrounded and overgrown by a wilderness of creeping and climbing plants, of ferns, orchids and other parasites so thickly intertwined as to convince the traveler of the impossibility of his undertaking except with the aid of ax and fire. After a prolonged struggle he was fain to make good his retreat, stung by mosquitoes, bitten by ants, with torn clothes and arms and legs bleeding from the thorns and prickles with which the climbing palm (Calamus), the climbing hibiscus, the euphorbia, and a multitude of other jungle plants, repulsed every attack made on their impenetrable labyrinth. "But the attempt," observes the professor, had not been made altogether in vain, for it enabled me to gain a very fair idea of the jungles as a whole, more especially of the magnificence of its trees and creepers, besides introducing me to many separate varieties of animal and vegetable life, which were of the highest interest. Here I saw the magnificent gloriosa superba, the poisonous lily of Ceylon with its red and amber flowers; the prickly hibiscus radiatus, with large cup-shaped, brimstone-colored flowers, deepening to violet in the hollow; while around them fluttered gigantic black butterflies with blood-red spots on their tail shaped wings, and chafers and dragon-flies flew past with a metallic glitter. But my delight reached its height when on this first attempt to penetrate a jungle [illegible] I came across the two most [illegible] inhabitants from among the highest classes of animals—parrots and apes. A [illegible] green parrot flew screeching from a lofty tree as they became aware of the gun in my hand, and at the same moment a herd of great black apes sprang with a growling cry into the [illegible] I did not succeed in getting a shot at either one or the other; they appear [illegible] familiar with the look of a gun. I was consoled, however, by securing my first shot at a colossal lizard or iguana, six feet long, [illegible] (Hydrosaurus salvator). The huge crocodile-like beast was sunning himself on the edge of a water-tank, and the shot hit him so precisely on the head as to kill him at once. Had it struck any less vital part he would probably have dived into the water and disappeared. When stirred, the [illegible] power of hitting so sharp a blow [illegible] tail as to cause a severe wound, and even sometimes a broken limb." [illegible]

Condition of Trade in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Following [illegible] of the report of the condition of trade here for the week ending to-day: While there is less of activity in most departments of trade, owing partly to [illegible] of unfavorable weather, business of the week has been on the whole satisfactory.

Money market [illegible] and outlook regarded favorable.

[illegible]

The [illegible] market [illegible] has [illegible] tained.

[illegible]

Butter and cheese—[illegible] fluctuations [illegible]

[illegible]

Cash corn and contracts in the near by months show little change from [illegible] strength all along the line, but with prices a little below previous figures. The market has been irregular and unsettled.

In cotton the tendency has been gradually downward. Receipts have increased and the general condition of the market is weak.

In woolen [illegible] manufactured goods. The failure of a few manufacturers of the east has somewhat affected the strength of the market for wool, materially reducing values.

Petroleum transactions have been large, but fluctuations are not wide and the general condition is one of moderate strength.

In freights, with the exception of cotton freights the market has been dull and rates lowered.

Coffee is dull and without animation. Merchants are small and large buyers holding off. The consumptive demand has increased a little.

Sugar shows a trifle more demand from refiners for raw. The distributing trade is light and more or less concession to induce purchases.

Tea auction sales which fix the standard prices, give indications of lower rates.

Trade in nuts is generally dull except in walnuts, in which the supply exceeds the demand.

In furniture the general trade has been somewhat disappointing, but prices show little or no weakness.

Eastern Freight Situation.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—A gleam of sunshine, the first for a week, has caused a trifle more activity at the wharves of vessels loading for San Francisco, and although there is no such movement of freight as in former years, we have been accustomed to at this season, still there is a fair amount of freight going forward, and ships are moving very well, all things considered. The Abner I. Benson has finished her cargo, including in part, 150 cases canned goods, 253 cases turpentine, 10 barrels and 2000 cases oil, 2040 barrels cement, 600 barrels plaster, 75 barrels rosin, 75 barrels pitch, 229 barrels whisky, 250 bales hemp, 350 tons coal, 2616 bars steel rails, a lot of lumber, wagon material, etc. Rates for freight remain quite steady and there is a disposition to advance them, owing to the scarcity of tonnage and full prices asked for available ships, but the general quietness of the market is a drawback, and there will be no appreciable advance, except, perhaps, in some special articles. Tonnage suitable for the California trade is still in very limited supply, and near by vessels are held above rates current in the market. Both lines, however, have all they require for present wants, and are not at all uneasy in regard to the future.

Railroad freights have been fairly active, notwithstanding the weather has been such as to prevent free movements. Shipments the past week include 190 cases sardines, 456 cases of [illegible] goods, 337 cases milk, 801 packages tobacco, 146 kegs and 10 barrels syrup, 100 cases [illegible], 75 bags coffee, 300 boxes raisins, 172 barrels currants, 10 packages figs, 10 cases citron, 3[illegible] bags nuts, 20 bales clover, 10 casks prunes, 60 barrels apples, 150 boxes assorted coffee, 115 crates mince meat, 100 cases [illegible], 10 barrels molasses, 150 boxes [illegible], 1[illegible] cases preserves, 1[illegible] barrels oysters, 253 kegs pickled fish, 1[illegible] cases saleratus, 10 boxes soda, 5[illegible] cases [illegible], 30 cases cereals, 25 boxes syrup, 100 boxes cheese, 150 cases champagne, 3[illegible] cases [illegible], 2[illegible] kegs nails.

Industrial Notes.

Specials to the New Orleans Times-Democrat from various points in Louisiana, Texas and [illegible] report heavy rains of the past few days have done much damage to cotton.

Rubber manufacturers of the United States continued in session Friday at New York. About sixty manufactories, representing capital of over $3,000,000, adopted, in order to overcome [illegible] the [illegible] ture of their [illegible], a resolution that manufacturers of rubber boots and shoes close their factories Dec. 1, and keep them closed till the price of rubber be reduced to a proper basis, and the dealers in rubber goods reduce the consumption of rubber until after Nov. 1st. A committee was appointed to present a plan for organizing a rubber importing company with at least fifty million dollars capital.

Maritime Miscellany.

"The British bark Latona, 816 tons, arrived yesterday at Victoria, 48 days from Shanghai. She is a splendid vessel and on her first voyage, having been built last year. She is under charter to Balfour, Guthrie & Ward to load salmon for London.

From a report in London, made by the commander of the steamer Louise, a trading vessel which endeavored to reach the mouth of Yenisei river, in company with the Dutch Arctic expedition ship Varna, it is considered that both the Varna and a vessel of the Danish Arctic expedition are in a dangerous position, as they were both beset by ice in Kara sea about 50 miles from the continent.

Michigan Crop Reports.

DETROIT, Oct. 20.—Reports from threshing machines, received by the secretary of state in September and October, and published in the Michigan Crop Report for October, show 1,158 acres of wheat threshed, about one-fifth of the entire crop. The average per acre is [illegible] bushels, or a total in the state estimated at 31,680,000 bushels. This estimate is not only absolutely accurate, but estimates are close. The average yield per acre is 6 34-100 higher than last year, and 3 62-100 higher than the average for the four years preceding. Farmers in September marketed 11,740,000 bushels of wheat. Of oats, 81,311 acres are reported threshed; average yield, 32 bushels per acre. Corn and potatoes show full average crops. Cattle and sheep are in fine condition. Average yield of apples, 52 per cent; peaches, 65 per cent.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Wheat unsettled and higher. Regular, 95[illegible] Oct., 96 Nov., [illegible] 96[illegible]. General merchandise [illegible] active, sales being for the most part ahead of last year. Groceries are active. Dairy and garden produce have quick sales at stronger prices. Boston Wool Market.

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—The wool market is rather [illegible] by reason of several failures of manufacturers, and this has proven quite [illegible] the market here during the past week. Sales were 752,000 pounds of all kinds, [illegible] the smallest business for some months. Prices were unchanged, but buyers of undoubted credit will always prefer a lower [illegible] and to this class of buyers [illegible] some concessions. Fine fleeces are firm, as previously noticed, and sales have been at full previous prices. Sales of Ohio X, 40@42c; Ohio and Pennsylvania XX, 43@46c; and choice XX and above at 44@45½c. Michigan X fleeces have been quiet with sales at 38@40c, which is a fair quotation. Combing and delaine wools are in demand and selling at 44@46c for fine delaine; 46 @48c for fine and No. 1 combings; medium combings 42c and coarse combings at a wide range of prices. Unwashed wools are in demand at 23@35c for fine and medium, 100,000 lbs. of choice medium selling at [illegible] latter rate, and coarse and low at 18@20c. In California wool, business has been trifling. Pulled wools are in fair demand at 25@36c for choice eastern, and Maine super, and 18@22c for common and good. Foreign wool is quiet and sales confined to small lots.

What is Nickel?

... Mines of nickel are worked at Chatham ... and Lancaster, Pa., and it is said to be found at Mine La Motte, Mo., and at several points in Colorado and New Mexico, where but little attention is paid to ... It is extensively mined in Saxony and in Sweden, but the late discovery ... a new ore (a silicate of nickel) in New Caledonia will probably supplant the use of the arsenical ores, and yet bring nickel into common use. Switzerland in the year 1852, made a coin of German silver which is identical in composition with our nickel coin. The United States made nickel cents in 1856, and eight years later coined the 5 cent pieces. Belgium adopted nickel coinage in 1860 and Germany in 1873. England has lately coined pennies for Jamaica, but at home she and France adhere to the clumsy copper small change.

He Took the Leather Medal.

"What a queer noise clams will some times make," remarked the manager of a clam abbatoir in a prominent restaurant yesterday.

"Yes," said a long-nosed stranger standing near, "but it is a fact that the musical abilities of the clam are not fully appreciated. When I lived on Coney Island before it became the watering place it is now I managed a clam quartet. You look as if you do not believe it. I had no trouble to obtain ... bass, tenor and alto, but I was obliged to import a delicate Little Neck ... to sing soprano. I built a sort of tide gate for my performers and they were so well trained that they would come out on the platform I had built and render Auld Lang Syne with all the gravity and more musically than any average church choir."

"Why didn't you travel with them?" said the oysterman.

"That's what makes me sad," said the narrator. "On a summer morning the soprano got some sand in her throat, and before help could be summoned the Little Neck had departed. One of the saddest scenes I ever witnessed was when the three surviving members gathered around and sung an impressive dirge. I opened the tide gate and within thirty minutes the survivors had departed, carrying the remains of the soprano with them."

"Sam," said the clam butcher, "here he is, I knew he would come."

And Sam produced a delicate medal of leather, on which was inscribed, "To the most accomplished liar on American soil." — Rochester Journal.

What Is Home?

A home is a place where character is formed, education goes on, and where people are impressed for time and fitted for eternity. It is a place to be happy in, to go in and start out from for all good homes and earnest living. Very great is her responsibility who is queen of this kingdom. To a very important extent she makes or mars its complete ness. A fretful, fault-finding, narrow ... woman in the position of wife and mother can cloud a home while she keeps house well and scrubs the floors till they are as white as snow. But the ... recording angel surveying her performance ... will surely say ... you to have done and not have left the other undone.

In a home there should be liberty without license, time for family intercourse and space for personal solitude, room for the entertainment of guests and the maintenance of social life and ... over all a tender, trusting ... of true devotion and communion with God. All this is not wholly but largely in the hands of her who is the central thought and well spring of pleasure in every comfortable Christian home, the deep honored and gracious mother.

Let nobody who is a housekeeper fear ... she performs her duties faithfully ... is worthy of no stinted praise. — Christian Weekly.

The cotton or woolen ... which form the groundwork or warp of the fabric are stretched upon a frame the width of the rug and the family or such members of it as are able to work sit on the floor and tie knots in the warp threads with the colored wool tufts, tightening the finished ... now and then with a rough comb. Each worker takes about twenty seven ... of the rug and works along this strip from two to four inches a day ... at which the rug advances if the family is large enough for the whole ... the rug to advance at the same time. A rug eight or nine feet wide requires four persons who work side by side. The finishing of the rug, smoothing, clipping, etc., is a work requiring skill and judgment. The wages are very small and the payment is according to the number of square feet. The work ... know certain patterns by heart and dye their own wools. The old dyes have in some instances been supplanted by aniline colors which do not keep their tones and fade without giving to the rug the softness of tint which is the chief glory of a fine Eastern rug. So many merchants have refused to buy the carpets in which aniline dyes have been used that the use of them may eventually be stopped.

The rug makers as a class are poor in money, very ignorant and religious but live comfortably. Especially around the borders of the Caspian sea, in the country watered by the rivers of the Caucasian mountains, are the people in comfortable circumstances although about three centuries behind the rest of the world. The rugs and carpets are brought from Persia and the neighboring districts on camels' backs, the arrival of a camel train being one of the curious sights of the town.

No Chance for Honor.

We were all at the depot in Macon, waiting for the train to go, when a colored man with a head as round as a bull ... came bustling in and picked up a friend and brother and jammed him against the wall and slammed him on the floor and bestowed upon his cocoanut some blows which must have made that organ ache in a lively manner. The victim was a tall serious looking man, wearing a plug hat and carrying a small satchel. He made no resistance, and when it was all over he sat down and rubbed the kinks out of his hat as coolly as if a pounding was an everyday occurrence.

"Rather sudden?" I remarked, as the crowd thinned out.

"Werry sudden, sah, an' altogether ... precedent," he replied.

"I noticed that you didn't resist."

The proper place to die ... respected by all who knew you, and all who didn't, is farther up than Sydney. OLD POPPLEWELL'S WILL.

[illegible] Silas Popplewell [illegible] bequeath [illegible] Mrs. Dravcott [illegible] attention [illegible] the slightest [illegible] self with [illegible] grew [illegible] his father [illegible] heart [illegible]

Silas Popplewell came across the will [illegible] unexpectedly while [illegible] the old man's papers a few hours after his decease. The document appeared to be perfectly legal and had evidently been prepared by a lawyer whose name was [illegible] I [illegible] the will [illegible] Silas Popplewell [illegible] sole one [illegible] considering that old [illegible] Popplewell was reputed to be a wealthy man most persons in Silas's position would not have suffered the unexpected legacy to disturb their equanimity. But Silas Popplewell was one of those mean, grasping, avaricious individuals who cannot bear the thought of losing anything. He considered he was both legally and morally entitled to the whole of his father's property, and regarded the legacy to Mrs. Dravcott as a fraud upon his just rights. He was, therefore, overwhelmed with rage and disappointment and worked himself into a perfect fever of virtuous indignation.

In the midst of this tribulation it suddenly occurred to him that [illegible] the sheet of paper which he held in his hand he [illegible] or man by two thousand pounds sterling. This eminently practical view of the situation aroused his worst passions and he [illegible] found himself wondering what would probably happen if the will were not forthcoming. Supposing for instance, he were to leave the document where he found it and say nothing to anybody. The chances were, he thought, that the housekeeper would believe the testator had revoked it [illegible] of its existence, while it was still possible, considering his late father's [illegible] concerning his affairs [illegible] expected nothing. [illegible] hue and cry were raised [illegible] conveniently found, or better still who could gainsay him if he were to declare [illegible] his father destroyed the will in his presence.

Such insidious reflections as these are apt to blunt a man's moral perceptions, especially when he is laboring under a [illegible] sense of injustice. Silas Popplewell's standard of morality was not a high one and he would any day sooner have done [illegible] than lose a sixpence. The consequence was that after a little hesitation he decided to [illegible] will to the flames.

When the paper was reduced to ashes Silas [illegible]

[illegible]

"Mr. Popplewell will inherit everything as next of kin and heir at law," replied [illegible]

The information exhibited a loud chorus of indignation and many insulting epithets were hurled at the head of the heartless Silas, who, pale and trembling, realized that his triumph was dearly bought even at the price of £2000. Suddenly the strident tones of Mrs. Dravcott became audible above the uproar and [illegible] attention.

The old villain has spoken forth with [illegible] a smoking scoundrel [illegible] [illegible] But I no longer [illegible] secret and I won't. I say, Bill [illegible] you ought to know me though it's thirty years and more since I was supposed to [illegible] died. You recollect Poll Saunders [illegible] Popplewell married when he was [illegible] at the railway down Liverpool way?"

"Why surely!" ejaculated [illegible] "Aye, it's Poll, sure enough," he added, shading his eyes with his hand.

"I was his lawful wife, Mr. [illegible] knew it," she explained, turning to [illegible] He deserted me years ago [illegible] married a lady—Mr. Silas's mother. I found him out again [illegible] and promised to keep his secret [illegible] that he would provide for me by his will [illegible] has been false to me as he was [illegible] and now I won't keep silent any longer."

"This is most serious," said [illegible] turning to Silas, who [illegible] aghast [illegible] if this [illegible] her marriage."

"Oh! I have proofs," [illegible] interposed the ardent Mrs. Dravcott [illegible] long slip of paper from her [illegible] [illegible] it to the lawyer. "Read it," [illegible] "look at what I made him sign [illegible]"

It is a marriage certificate," said Mr. [illegible] glancing at it [illegible]

The small province of Hohenzollern, with a population of only 67,000, is the champion consumer of beer in the entire domain of Prussia. By the statistical bureau, while an average consumption of beer in the whole country for 1881 is struck at 81.2 litres, in Hohenzollern the average on the same basis reaches 158 litres. These 67,000 inhabitants of Hohenzollern spent for beer in the same year 1,203,405 marks above the normal average for a like number of people elsewhere in Prussia.

Mrs. Welden noted in London for her persistently asserted claim upon Gounod the composer, [illegible] of his visit to the Birmingham music festival to prepare for a demonstration. She determined to stand up in the hall while his "Redemption" was receiving its first public performance and denounce him. The festival committee, however, took successful measures to exclude her, whereupon she threatened suit for damages, but compromised on receiving the cost of her tickets and journey.

The report of the King of Sweden having insured his life for the sum of 600,000 crowns needs explanation. The benevolent monarch only did so for the purpose of re-establishing the credit of a home life insurance company. He did a similar thing some years ago in the case of a large banking house, on which the public made a run without a cause, and of the strength, integrity and solvency of which the king was firmly convinced. He deposited his private fortune with the house and immediately restored public confidence.

An old [illegible] "And you say that you are innocent of the charge of stealing a rooster [illegible]" asked an Arkansaw judge of a meek-looking prisoner. "I [illegible] prove that I [illegible] the same [illegible] from Grass[illegible]," said the judge. Discharge the prisoner.—Arkansaw Traveler.
